Fight in Parliament Over Change in Constitution May Not Develop.

London, March 25.-Week after week events such as the reciprocity treaty with Canada and the Taft arbitration scheme have come to the front to absorb public attention here, thus putting the fight over the change in the constitution in the background.

The fact is that at the present moment mor was floated to the effect that within five weeks Parliment will adjourn until after the coronation so as to get that event over quietly and perhaps arrange a basis of compromise before Parliament could reassemble. Immediately there was an outery, and without delay the rumor was officially denied. It is probable now that there will be an adjournment for ten days only during the festivities.

ritorial pedigree that goes back to the reign of King George III of England. It was contained in one of the royal grants from the hand of the latter and figured in the letters of Lord Baltimore late in the eighteenth century.

Shortly after the close of the Revolutionary war it passed into the hands of a wealthy landowner named Beall, and was known as "Beall's Adventure." Adjoining it on the west is another part of the original estate, set down in musty records as "Beall's Pleasure," and between the two properties, down what is now the Anacostia road, Gen. Ross led his British forces as he retired from the burning capital during the war of ISI, passing under the silent fortifications of Fort Mahan, from which the small garrison had watched the firing of the nation's Capital.

The first mansion was crected on the place early in the nineteenth century, after "Beall's Adventure" had been sold to another family, the head of which is still remembered by ancient darkeys living around there as "Marse Majah Manning." For years—even after it had descended to the major's cleest son, Dr. Wilford Manning—the place was one of the bandsomest plantation estates in this vicinity. Farmed by scores of slaves, boasting fine howers and live stock, and within a few miles of the Capitol, it was one of the show places of the District.

Maj. Manning had all the Southerner's learned of the possibilities for fine sands and gravels, he speedily dispatched a corps of geologists to the scene. After drilling and testing in a number of places, Mr. Swift's experts brought back glowing accounts of the composition of the soil and plans immediately were begun to start placer mining operations on an extensive scale. The machinery reached the scene in January, 190, and by April the first finished product was ready. And after several thousand tons had been cut out of the hill, it was found that some sections contained native gold in sufficient quantities to justify the use of mercury plates in the flumes to catch the precious yellow particles.

In that industry, the District is fostering the only hydraulic or placer mining plant east of the Rockies, and the output is 600 tons daily of fine assorted sands and gravels, used for all building purposes. Besides finding a large market among local contractors and builders, the product is being shipped to all localities in this part of the country. At the present rate of progress thirty years' work will be required to exhaust the supply.

From the separating machines the finished product, after having been thoroughly washed by a system of sprays until each pebble glistens like an ore specimen, is automatically loaded into small dump cars and run out to its appointed place, or dropped into the waiting wagons.

Hitherto all of the sand and gravel rupply for this city has been dredged from the Potomac river.

Unique not only for Washington, but for the greater part of this country, the plant is well worth a visit by all who are interested in the development of natural resources.
